HONGKONG, NOVEMBER 1st, 1880.

THE announcement that Mr. Grnedus ha been interdicted from the performance of his duties as Registrar of the Supreme Court will take no one by surprise. With regard to the justice of the measure, that is a matter | kept dark. as to which there may well be a difference of That if the Executive did take action, which it soemed very unwilling to do, the weaker of the two disputants would go to the wall The question will, as a matter of course, be referred home, when its merits no doubt will be thoroughly gone into; the result will be awaited with interest by all and with a mea sure of anxiety by some. Many rumours have been current as to what has passed behind the scenes : amongst others one to the effect that the Executive, when the matter first came before them, arrived at the conclusion that they could not suspend one of the officials concerned without suspending both. How far this may be true we are not in a position to state, but such a course would not, we think, have appeared to the public in disaccord with justice. The plan of interdicting one of the belligerents from the performance of his duties has apparently been adopted as an intermediary course, less for the purpose of marking disapproval of the interdicted officer than of removing Cores. interdiction, he has the good wishes of the communityfor his ultimate exoneration. With regard to the attitude Mr. Gibbons assumed in relation to some of the matters in dispute there can be no reasonable doubt of its correctness. To take the case of HUFFAM, for instance, however agreeable to private feeling secrecy might be, it would naturally be his signature. The latter gentleman accordingly thought that after the frauds disclosed signed it. and the consequent saindal, the fullest publicity in all the proceedings would have been courted. We do not say there has been studied concealment, but some of the proceedings which have been conducted in Chambers, might have been taken in by severe fighting near Lantelan, and that 34,000 open Court had the Judge thought proper but it has apparently been no part of the Chief Justice's purpose to court publicity. As illustrative of this it is a notable fact that one of the cases which the Chief Justice insisted on taking in Chambers, was transferred into open court by Mr. Justice Snowden when the cases were made over to him, His vices. The claim was for $10,275.70, money wounded man going first, and the captain being Smith sat as assessors. The case was dismissed SNOWDEN's individual share in this unfortunate difference, is that he lends his official support to the Chief Justice's side of the question, we are pleased to observe that His offered to pay on production of proper vonchers arrival on shore and stripped of almost all that Honour had the independence to remove the case referred to from Chambers into open Court acting upon his lown opinion as to the propriety of giving that particular case publicity, the Chief Justice's insistence to the contrary notwithstanding.

As will be observed, by the telegrams reproduced from the American papers which arrived on Saturday, the condition of Ireland is becoming truly deplorable. 'A Reuter's telegram published on Saturday unnounced spirators; and it would seem from the telegrams from the Alta that this step was in contemplation nearly a month ago. and after mature consideration. Bill for a more equitable distribution of seats in Parliament according to population, by which Ireland, while losing the undue proportion of members she now has in the Commons, would still be fairly represented, and the House probably relieved of some obstructive and incendiary fire-brands. Every alleged grievance should at the same time be examined, and, if well founded, should be redressed; while, if imaginary, the complainant should be sammarily dismissed. The present state of the country is certainly a disdiscredit upon the Government, under whose rule such lawlessness has become possible. Affairs have now reached such a pass that effective measures must be taken to stem the tide of sedition and bring back the island to a condition of order and security.

LOSS OF THE FRENCH BARQUE "TAFFARETTE"

We published on Saturday a paragraph, which stated that 12 men had arrived at Holhow belonging to a vessel called the Lafayette. The name of the vessel seems to have been corrupted in oral transmission, as we have now received full particulars of the wreck, which is that of the French barque Taffiretic, and, although we were Mr.W. Walker, J.N., b. Wilson not aware that the Lafayette was at present in China waters, we could not then connect the lost vessel with the Taffaratte, inasmuch as she left this port nearly three weeks ago for Newchwang, and might well be supposed to have reached a latitude nearer 40 N. than that her crew should be found landing in somowhere about 20. The following is a fall report of the disastors which befall the ill-fated vessel from the time she left

SUMMER TWILIGHT. Ah! what an hour of ecstasy is this! When all of Nature in our view is shrinking From the too ardent sun's retiring kiss, And fast in twilight's clasp her hand is linking. When from the joyous wood comes thrilling out, Tossed on the air that drowaily is hearkening. A storm of melody, a silver rout Of gorgoous sounds—no sombre touches darkening. The gay, clear tone at intervals that gash From blackbird's throat, so limpid, pure and thrilling, The wild, bowitching prayer-notes of the thrush, .. Now trembling low, now high in quavers thrilling. The tiny; rippling warble of the wren ; . The chaffinch's short, swiftly-tuned gladness; The muffied call of suckoos from the glen; The wood-dove's shadowy, far-of ooo of sadness. While 'neath the sye, to the horizon spread, 'Circled by hills, and gem-encrusted mendows Heaped with seeming gold-dust, thickly shed By sprinkling fingers, hid by nearing shadows. The gallant knights that guard the western plains Of the sun's kinglom, send their amber lances Quivering across the sky, till Night restrains Their pustime, and her serconing wing advances. Sweying the clemn heads of mighty trees,

The zephyr's round them sweep with restless eightig The timourous apens shiver in the brocce, Its lack of restalegend quaintsupplying. It is, that choses from all else, its wood In ages past to form the Cross was taken. That shuddering and apart it since has stood, With wild regret from leaf to ibro chaken. To the wild rosse at its base, that gleam So wan and pale from out their duaky setting, It whispers: "Fear not; soon again shall beam Your heads and the sunlight's golden netting."

Now to the north the keen and vivid sky Doth hold upon its lap a gleaning jawel; Gnate croon their vespers, and Night hovering nigh Bids labour coses till dawn demands renewal. -Chambers' Journal.

GIPSY LIFE IN SOUTHERN EUROPE. In this part of Europe the gipsy is to be seen in the purest type, strongly resembling the mulatto, except that the eye is generally more liquid, like that of the Spanish or Italian race. As a rule, the men are finer looking than the women, their pictures que costume, gold earrings, and long curls adding greatly ever, one sees among me young girss real three or four courses with souns, as bruce— He then rubbed his eyes with ghee (or Eastern beauty, who might serve for a model three or four courses with souns, as bruce— He then rubbed his eyes with ghee (or for Cleopaira, but usually their principal attraction lies in their peculiar dress—a bright the present day), bread, onions, leeks, pepper, condend in opening them, when the eyes aphandkerchief wound around the blackest of and cloves. 1st, Boar's head, beef, mutton, peared quite motionless and glazed. How a gipsy toilet is made excited our curiosity, while baffling even our feminine comprehension. Their finery and trinkets, of which they are very fond-even the men indulging in such adomments-are of rather a tawdry description, and cleanliness does not appear to be a favourite virtue among them. Many of the gipsies have beautiful houses and extensive estates in Siebenburgen; are rich, not only in money and lands, but possess treasures in plate and ture old furniture, for which they may well be envied. Notwithslanding these attractions at home to induce them to lead a domestic life, this race, upon whom the curse of disquietude seems to rest, can only enjoy their homes for short periods.
